Workbook Section Four | Questions 16-21

Project: CS110 Study Task Hub
Route: Operations Hub

Design plan: proposed behavior and peer checks are not recorded test results.

The Story Foundation

16. What is the learning project called?

CS110 Study Task Hub - Week 8 Operations Hub.

17. Who is the central character?

An, a CS110 student organizing a study session on a Windows computer.

18. What problem does the character face?

Study tasks are scattered across notes and browser tabs. An spends time deciding what to do next and needs a clear list to begin a focused study session.

19. What does success look like?

An has one window to add and remove study tasks, start or pause a focus timer, and export a readable study report. These are the planned outcomes for the completed Week 8 app.

The Narrative Arc

20. Write a personal, specific story opener.

An sits down for his CS110 study session, but his tasks are spread across notes and browser tabs. He opens Study Task Hub, adds the first task, and uses the list to decide where to begin.

21. Where will the story reappear?

The app title and subtitle identify the student study context. Sample tasks refer to CS110 activities, and the focus timer and exported report connect the work to a study session.
